

For project two, I would like to research the Vizcaya Gardens located in Miami, Florida. Since being there before, I've wanted to dive deeper into the history and story behind the gardens as it's a very beautiful spot. The website overall will aim to cover the history of the gardens from the building to the land and the art stored within it. The information will cover basic overviews of the individual categories.

The website will contain a home page, history page, art and architecture page, and info page. The welcome will showcase any important info or pictures of the gardens. The history page will include a timeline of events, pictures, and any important information about the gardens from when it was built and how it was built. The art and architecture page will include history on the artworks within the main building and its layout. And the info page will include the address, sources, and how to visit and/or donate to the gardens. The website will prioritize info, and pictures rather than illustrations. The website may also include a logo, and the feel of the website will take on a more calm and curious nature rather than clean and sterile.
