

The website is going to be an extension of the original website I made about Bauhaus. The new website is going to pull design elements and its color scheme from Bauhaus designs. The typefaces used are going to be limited and sans serif in order to maximize legibility and tie back to the Bauhaus style. The overall layout is going to be relatively straight forward, with there being a main index page, and four sections which will each have mixed content of text and pictures. The website is mainly going to talk about the history and philosophy of Bauhaus along with showcasing their work and the influence it has had on modern design, as well as commemorating the 100th year since its founding in Weimar in 1919.
