For my research project, I have decided to either research the history of fantasy literature, or the history of YA literature. I really like reading and my favorite genres are YA fantasy and romance. When I think about it, not a lot of people may know of the history of literature genres, so it would be interesting to learn about the history of these genres, especially to fans of YA literature or fantasy.

Which ever topics I choose, I plan on having a different webpage for each significant historical aspect of the genre that the user can click through and read about. I don't think I need a logo for this site and I plan on looking for the images online. My target audience for this website is fans of fantasy or YA literature.
