

For this research project, I plan on writing about dance. I am a self-taught hip hop dancer and I have been dancing since I was five years old. It is mainly a side hobby of mine though I do perform from time to time if I choose to attend an event and such, but it is not something I would like to pursue professionally since I am not that passionate enough about making a career out of it. I will write about the history of hip hop dancing specifically (since that is the genre of dance I am into) and talk about how it came to be. I plan on using videos of popular worldwide known hip hop dancers and might also use some videos of myself dancing. I will also talk about my personal views and experiences with hip hop dancing to help add to the informational aspects of hip hop dancing.

I can apply user experience design to this website by making it extremely easy to navigate. I don't plan on overcomplicating things; I want to keep my website as simple yet informational as possible. I think I want to follow a similar format as I did with my first project, but I will probably make it more colorful instead of using the white, black, and red theme that I had with my Banksy website. I will have a navigation bar with three or four links. For each page I will write about a specific aspect of hip hop dancing to make it easy for users to understand and navigate to.
