Project Proposal

A topic I would like to do research on is Coral Reefs because I want to show why they are so important and what they do for the ecosystem. My audience would be people who are interested in coral reefs, or don't know much about them and would like to learn. The best way to present my topic is to first briefly explain what coral reefs are in the homepage, then go more in depth in an about section. Then have another page explaining why they are important and what they do for the environment. Lastly have a contacts page and possibly a section for questions as well as references. To make the design relate to my topic I will make the color palette match coral reef colors, and instead of having separate pages make the links that jump to specific parts on the same page. I feel like doing this will make everything flow together like water. For the logo, I can make a simple design of coral reefs, or I can use a logo from an organization that specializes in coral reefs. I will find images of coral reefs.
